I have `SELECT * FROM (SELECT r., @r := CASE WHEN @name = 'odd' THEN r.name END r_name, @r := CASE WHEN @name = 'even' THEN r.name END r_name FROM tbl_receipts r, (SELECT @name := null, @r := 0) s) t ORDER BY r_name DESC` this gives me the correct order, but is there a better way of doing this? The issue is, the data is load from an external source and is coming in with a column named 'odd' or 'even' but I want to display it as the actual 'odd' or 'even' values. This is for a mysql database A: I think you just need a table alias: `SELECT r., @r:=CASE WHEN @name = 'odd' THEN r.name END name, @r:=CASE WHEN @name = 'even' THEN r.name END name FROM tbl_receipts r, (SELECT @name:=NULL, @r:=0) s ORDER BY r.name DESC` This does use a named variable but that is probably best because, unless the ORDER BY condition is r_name DESC, a different value will end up in @r than in the other column, so you don't have control over the sorting order, but the values are both from the same source, so the same sorting order should be used. Whether to use vars at all in MySQL is a matter of opinion. I do not use them, but others do. Treatment of fibromyalgia with vitamin D and K: a randomized, placebo-controlled, double
