Q: WPF and Programmatic control of the select event in combobox I would like to use a combobox to select different states for a list. Currently my xaml is: The bind is easy enough. The problem is that the text in the combobox is a string with the DisplayName, not the PropertyName. I would like to manipulate the ItemSource list of the combobox in code to do different things depending on the state. This seems simple, but I can't figure out how to do it. The.NET Reflector shows that it actually has a SelectedValueChanged property, but when I use it, I get a confusing exception ("The property or indexer 'SelectedValue' was not found on the textblock 'Label.SelectedValue'."). Thanks for any help. A: The SelectedValueChanged is the property you need to capture. Your binding would look like this.
