In 2012, the United States reported the lowest credit card delinquency rate in over a decade. The credit card delinquency rate fell to 1.46 percent from 1.65 percent in 2011. The U.S. consumer credit report also showed: Total consumer debt reached a new all-time high. More than $2.8 trillion was added to U.S. consumer debt in 2012. This amounted to $47,755 per person. Lenders gave out $48.2 billion in new auto loans to U.S. car buyers in 2012. This was a 16.2 percent increase over 2011. Consumers paid off $8.5 billion of short-term loans, including home improvement loans, commercial real estate loans, and payday loans. Lenders are now able to charge interest on these loans at the state-chartered credit unions, which made up $8.6 billion of the total. Credit card balances also dropped to $843.4
