I just found a bunch of little boys in my uterus at 9dp5c. I think they are only slightly smaller than the girls are. They feel almost exactly like girls. I called it girls because I felt that they were girls by the time they were born. I would really like to have 3 girls this time around as I think they are the real girls... Our son is 5 months and 6 days. His sisters are both 5 months, 4 days. He was 9 days older than I was. A schedule is the only way for us to have them all in place and help each other grow. We are also due in January. We are very close to our due date, but we won't get them until January. We don't want to get them until January so that we have a few extra months at home together (plus at least a month of exclusive breastfeeding).

We also like to have the girls home for awhile before they have to go to day care. At this point, we are going to put them in a bassinet in the baby's room until they are about 10-12 weeks old. Then we'll transfer them to the playpen and take them to day care after that. We just had our 4 month ultrasound today and we're having twins!!!! They said by the time they got to 12 weeks, they would be over 10 lbs. Boy or girl, we don't care. We are so excited!!! Can't wait to have your babies at once! I don't think I would want 3 either, but if I went that route with my twins I think I would be thinking about getting a tub.... It would be a wonderful time
