Q: Synchronous composition of several ajax requests? Suppose I have several ajax calls that I'd like to be executed in a similar fashion, namely one after the other. For example, I'd like to do the following: Make ajax call "A" Wait for a response (this is done in order to better check for e.g. request timeout). Make ajax call "B" Wait for a response from ajax call "A". Then the same for "C", and "D". I'm pretty sure there are better ways to achieve this with jQuery, so I'm looking for a simple to write (and maybe short) solution. I know it can be done with jQuery's deferred object, but I'm not very familiar with it.

A: You can use jQuery's $.when() function to synchronize the execution of async requests. It takes an array of requests and queues them up to be resolved when all the responses have been received. You can use it as follows: `var results = []; $.when($.ajax({ url: '/path/to/a' }), $.ajax({ url: '/path/to/b' }), $.ajax({ url: '/path/to/c' })).done(function(a, b, c) { results.push([a, b, c]); }); results.join(function(a, b, c) { // Do something with a, b, and c. });` / * Copyright 2015, Emory University * * Licensed under the Apache License,

Q: How to turn off Macbook After removing bluetooth? Good morning all, New to my MacBook Pro Retina 13" as I'm not fond of my Keyboard style. Has anyone tried to remove and turn off the Macbook while Bluetooth is enabled? Does anyone know how to do this? I removed the keyboard but cannot remove the power cord without removing my mouse and track pad.

A: You have to disconnect the power cord of your macbook. Remove the battery. If you do so, the power will be off and you can disconnect the power cord. After removing the power cord, you can remove the battery and then put it back and reattach the power cord.

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a locking mechanism and a detection method for a charging device for detecting the charge state of a battery accommodated in a charging device, the locking mechanism having a release mechanism which can be opened and closed with a control knob, and a connection box or the like which can be connected to the charging device.

2. Description of the Related Art Japanese Unexamined Patent Application Publication No. 4-361424 discloses a charging device provided with a release mechanism for opening and closing a charging port for plugging a charging cable connected to a battery. The charging port is coupled to a connector in the charging cable. The charging port is opened by an automatic operation of the release mechanism when the charging port is connected to the connector of the charging cable. Since the automatic release mechanism has a number of components, the manufacturing cost for the charging device is increased. In addition, a large space is required to maintain each component. "hopefull" way to avoid spending the night in jail to make a showy point. Good luck! Drop us a note at whatwg@
